THE YOUNG HOUSEWIFE'S LAMENT.

Dearily bought knowledge is mine, she cried,
Repayment fit for my wilful pride.

Warnings unheeded, and misplaced trust,
Are here resultant in ruined crust ;
Uneatable bread and lumpish dough.
Good Heavens ! what a lesson of woe !
Had I but thought of the tale oft told :
'Safe is the path that is beaten and old."

But we are tempted by frauds to stray ;
And for luring shadows the substance pay,
Knowing so well that my mother dear
Impressed on my mind "there is no peer."
Nor ever will be to the brand of WAUGH'S.
Good reason had I to give me pause.

Punished severely, but not in vain ;
Our wisdom comes through failure and pain.
When next I try nice things to make,
Destructive powders won't spoil the cake.
Experience gained supplies the test,
Right sure am I, now, that

Waugh's is the Best.
